

Capital Economics named most accurate forecaster of the Chinese economy

Capital Economics has just been named most accurate forecaster of the Chinese economy by global macro survey firm Consensus Economics.

This latest award reflects our ability to anticipate, and help clients understand, the near to long-term trajectory of the Chinese economy. Our view that China's trend growth rate would fall to just 2% by the end of this decade has become increasingly mainstream as the market wakes up to the structural and demographic headwinds facing the economy.

Our China coverage is led by Chinese-speaking economists based in offices in Europe and Asia and supported by our proprietary China Activity Proxy, a widely followed read of economic growth created independently of official data.
